HANGED BY THE NECK.

One Who Underwent the Operation Describes the Sensations.

In The Wide World Magazine Richard Hicks, an old time actor, tells of his narrow escape from being hanged on the stage of the Queen's theater, Dublin. He was playing the part of Achmet, a particularly villainous character, who after a long career of crime is, to the general satisfaction of the audience, captured by two British soldiers and promptly hanged.

"One night, while struggling with my captors, the rope slipped from my shoulders and knotted itself around my neck just as I was being hanged up," says Mr. Hicks. "Never shall I forget that awful moment. Directly I felt the tug at my neck I gave a convulsive kick and tried to shout 'Stop!' but the word could not escape from my twitching lips. I could only make a gurgling noise. Frankly I kicked and struggled. Pain there was none, strangely enough, beyond a choking, suffocating sensation, and I could hear the tumultuous applause of the audience, who were hugely entertained with what they imagined was my realistic acting.

"Then a terrible sensation, like molten lead rushing down my spine, pervaded my whole body, and I thought my legs were burning. I gave another mighty struggle and strove—ah! how I strove—to scream. I seemed to behold a mighty rush of green water, and my ears were filled with the roar of a cataract. I have a dim recollection of seeing a great crimson sun shining dimly from behind the waterfall, and I can remember falling indefinitely through space!

"Two days afterward I recovered consciousness, and then I suffered indescribable agony. The suffocating sensation still remained, but it was accompanied by an unquenchable thirst, not to mention fearful pains in my body and limbs."

CONJURED A TREATY.

How Houdin, the Magician, Aired the Arabs into Submission.

During the French conquest of Algeria (1830-1832) negotiations for peace were entered upon with the sheiks of certain Arab tribes, and a meeting for the settlement of terms was arranged to take place at the French headquarters. The French officers received their guests with great hospitality, and after the banquet given in their honor, at which the utmost splendor was employed, in order to dazzle their eyes and captivate their simple minds, an adjournment was made to a large hall, where M. Houdin, the celebrated conjurer, who had accompanied the French forces, gave an exhibition of his skill.

They stared in open-mouthed wonder at all the tricks that were performed, and a feeling of awe crept over them as they witnessed the mysterious appearance and disappearance of various objects. But what appeared to them most marvelous was the apparent manufacture of cannon balls. M. Houdin passed round among them a high hat, which they examined very carefully, but without suspecting anything unusual in either its make or its appearance. When the hat was returned to him the conjurer placed it on the floor in the middle of the stage in full view of his audience. He then proceeded to take from the hat cannon balls apparently without number, and rolled them across the floor into the wings. With this the performance terminated.

The chiefs then consulted among themselves and came to the conclusion that it was useless to offer any opposition to an army that could turn out its ammunition in so easy a manner. They therefore signed the required treaty and departed to tell their friends in the desert of the wonderful power of the invaders.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Letter to John.

A curiosity in the shape of a letter was mailed at a rural postoffice recently. On a sealed, stamped envelope was the following:
"Dear John—I write you this to say I got your letter on a Tuesday morning, and in this is wrote to you on Wednesday night. I will expect you shore on a Sunday. As you told me you didn't want folks to know where you wuz at, I have wrote an sealed your address on the inside, so's the postmaster won't be none the wiser. No one on earth will know what you are now. Write as soon as you git this."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Burman mile is about equal in length to two English miles. The word for "mile" in Burmese means "to sit." and a mile is the distance that a man goes before he considers it necessary to sit down.

The stage of the hall was neatly arranged with large tropical palms, almost hiding the orchestra.

The club, while in its infancy, has made remarkable progress, which is characteristic of its name. The new quarters consist of a dancing hall and ladies' and gentlemen's ante-rooms on the third floor. There is also a spacious stage at the south end of the hall, which will be used in giving dramatic entertainments. On the second floor is a nicely arranged banquet hall.
